Plenary Workshop: Teaching Practice Enhancement in the Basic Course

Sponsor: Basic Course Conference

Pratt Bennet, Berklee College of Music

This workshop and interactive session will be led by Teacher Transformational Training (TTT) Co-Founder Pratt Bennet, Berklee College of Music, Boston, MA. This session will allow basic course instructors to engage with vexing issues they face in their classes. The workshop is designed to help each instructor design, experiment with, and refine more effective teaching tools for their specific courses and create plans to track their effectiveness. In addition to basic course instructors identifying and designing new ways to experiment with their courses, we also plan to propose a panel for ECA 2018 from this session that allows us to come back together to share our successes, learning opportunities, and revisions plans based on the experimentations we devise in this workshop.

Plenary Town Hall Debate: Freedom to Consider the Following...

Sponsor: Basic Course Conference

Moderator: Scott Myers, West Virginia University

Be it resolved: The Communication field must establish a Basic Communication Course that is consistent in content and format across colleges and universities.

"For the Affirmative"

Lynn H. Turner, Marquette University

Nancy J. Willets, Cape Cod Community College

David McMahan, Missouri Western State University

"For the Negative"

Rich West, Emerson College

Sara Weintraub, Regis College

Candice Thomas-Maddox, Ohio University, Lancaster

This animated and engaged town hall debate comprised of panelists who have served as past presidents of the Eastern Communication Association, the Central States Communication Association, and the National Communication Association will engage the following. This program examines the role that the Basic Communication Course (BCC) plays in the field of communication studies.

Specifically, this debate will look at two specific concerns related to the BCC: Content and Approach. Debaters will examine several questions, including: What should be taught in the BCC across various departments? Should the field be encouraging consistency in BCC content so that administrators and laypeople understand the field? What approach works best in the BCC? Hybrid? Public speaking? Theoretical? Interpersonal/Group/Team?

In the spirit of the old Town Hall debates, audience members will be involved in the debate, overtly demonstrating their support for one side or the other.

Student Organizations and Organizational Communication: Examining how Organizational Theory and Practice Impact Student Organization

Sponsor: Organizational Communication
Chair: Kholo Theledi, Abilene Christian University
Respondent: Lauren Lemley, Abilene Christian University

Exploring Organization Sensemaking, Identification, and Commitment in Three College Student Organizations”
Piyawan Charoensap-Kelly, University of Southern Mississippi

“Bridging the Gap: Cultivating a culture of diversity and empathy between Panhellenic and Pan-Hellenic Organizations at Predominantly White Institutions”

Keturah Green, Southeastern Louisiana University

“How Much Freedom is Too Much?: A Systems Theory Case Study of How Student Organizations Function with and without a Faculty Advisor”

Matthew Petrunia, Fashion Institute of Technology, SUNY

“Instilling Principles of Shared Leadership in Student Clubs and Organizations: Going Back to the Basics”

Carley Young, University Southern Mississippi

This panel examines how organizational communication theory and practice shape student organizations through the use of sensemaking theory, anxiety/uncertainty management theory, systems theory, and applied communication principles.

Thursday 12:30-1:45 2.2.05 Gardner

Freedom from Cultural Incivility and Epistemic Violence: Towards Communication as a Discourse of Geo-epistemic Responsibility

Sponsor: Intercultural Communication
Chair: Fadoua Loudiy, Slippery Rock University
Respondent: Erik Garrett, Duquesne University

“Césairean Négritude as a Form of Cultural Civility and as a Discourse of Geo-epistemic Responsibility”
Chelsea R. Binnie, Duquesne University

“Freedom from Epistemic Violence: Toward a Discourse of Geo-epistemic Responsibility in Transnational Communication”

Arshia Anwer, Manhattan College

“Felix Guattari's Refrain: An Affective Response to Communicative Violence and Socio-political Incapacitation”

Fadoua Loudiy, Slippery Rock University

This panel is an invitation to explore the metaphors of “cultural civility” and “geo-epistemic responsibility” as potential responses to communicative incivility that occurs in intercultural encounters. We address the following question as it relates to the study and development of communication as a field of international and intercultural discourses: How can “cultural civility” and “communication as a discourse of geo-epistemic responsibility” offer freedom from rampant issues of communicative incivility and violence whilst preserving the essential thrust of freedom that is necessary for authentic communication between persons?

Flipping the Basics: Considering Flipped Classroom Methodologies in Basic Communication Courses

Sponsor: Instructional Communication
Chair: Lauren Lemley, Abilene Christian University

Jane Pierce Saulnier, Emerson College
Christopher Darr, Indiana University, Kokomo
Bailey Cate, Abilene Christian University
Kim Martinez, Abilene Christian University
Angela M. Hosek, Ohio University
Christine Courtrade Hirsch, SUNY – Oswego

Flipped course methods grant instructors freedoms to do many productive things (e.g., focus on application, spend time interacting with students, etc.) and freedom from others (e.g., having to “perform” while lecturing, spending time repeating concepts from homework, etc.). This session presents the advantages and challenges of implementing flipped classroom methodologies in communication courses through detailing specific classroom strategies, discussing how to plan/train for flipping a course, and sharing ideas for gaining instructor and student buy-in.

Toward Sustainable Futures: Environmental Communication as Applied Research

Sponsor: Applied Communication
Chair: Benjamin Wyman, University of Maine
Respondent: Brianne Suldovsky, University of Pennsylvania

“Stories of Success in Sustainability Science Collaborations”

Tyler Quiring, University of Maine
Abby Roche, University of Maine

“Scenic Overlooks, Visual Aesthetics, and Outdoor Recreational Practices”

Bryan Picciotto, University of Maine

“Municipal Food Ordinances in Maine”

John Welton, University of Maine

“Governmental Spin and the Paris Climate Talks”

Benjamin Wyman, University of Maine

This session applies theoretical tools from communication research contexts including team collaboration, visual aesthetics, political action, and propaganda analysis. Working within the fundamentally applied subfield of Environmental Communication, we demonstrate the utility of communication research for users working on practical issues including aquatic management, park recreation, agricultural recreation, and climate policy. In doing so, we seek freedom from theory that has limited application potential and freedom to promote sustainable practices that can build better futures.

Last Year Today: Late Night Comedy and the 2016 Election

Sponsor: Political Communication
Chair: Scott W. Dunn, Radford University

"Late Night Comedy and Political Engagement"
Dante Morelli, Suffolk County Community College

"Gender Affinity and Political Comedy in the 2016 Election"
Danielle Cantey, Boston University

"'Trumped Up Trickle Down Economics': What Are People Learning about the 2016 Presidential Election Coverage?"
Daniel Hunt, Worcester State University

"Making Donald Drumpf Again: A Rhetorical Analysis?"
Annabelle Everett, University of Rhode Island

"Debating the Impact: SNL and Attitudes towards Candidates?"
Gerard Jalette, University of Rhode Island

Late night comedy shows often target political candidates during election years. This election was unique in that the candidates were largely unfavorable, there were an unusual number of pre-elections scandals (both real and, um, perhaps not entirely rooted in reality), and at least one candidate could not stop tweeting at 3 in the morning. This panel draws upon a variety of traditions to discuss past research on the impact of political comedy and apply the findings to this year's crop of television programs.

Victoria Semple, Hofstra University

PowerPoint, Internet connection, clickers are augmented by BYOT (Bring your own technologies). Some educational institutions have policies providing mobile student technologies. Schools are asking students to "BYOD," or Bring Your Own Device. BYOD or BYOT (Bring Your Own Technology) programs have been introduced. Do we need to fundamentally change our expectations and rules associated with the communication environment of teaching and learning? What ethical standards and legal principles guide the restructuring of learning environments? This panel will explore the legal and ethical issues associated with managing new classroom communication environment.

Ethics and Academic Freedom: The Freedom to Be Free From...

Chair: Thomas R. Flynn, Slippery Rock University

D.L. Stephenson, Western Connecticut State University
Richard E. Vatz, Towson University
J. Kanan Sawyer, West Chest University of Pennsylvania
Rebecca M. Townsend, University of Connecticut, Storrs

This panel explores the ways in which certain academic practices, professional expectations, and hierarchal organizational structures foment a culture of fear and marginalization. This panel considers whether academics have any civic responsibility and ethical duty to each other when it comes to preventing and remedying hostile work environments in whatever form they may take. Most of the behavior that creates a hostile working environment in higher education today comes in the form of academic bullying and harassment, the misuse of authority, and pressures to conform. These problems, common in many organizations and institutions, give rise to an academic climate of intimidation, isolation, and exclusion. In some instances, faculty members report various forms of ostracism. In other instances, some faculty members experience outright bullying. According to Twale and DeLuca (2008) "[academic bullying] ...usually takes the form of "mobbing." Mobbing encompasses various forms of bullying behavior and may include the starting of unfounded rumors and slander to undermine a faculty member's credibility and reputation. Rumors and slander, which are virtually impossible for the targets to defend themselves against, may result in demotions or the loss of assignments without just cause. Further, the targets of harassment, bullying, and mobbing may be shunned, ostracized, and marginalized not only by the "mobbing" bullies, but also by those who believe the victims are somehow to blame for their treatment. In fact, on-lookers may view the target as overly sensitive and reactive or, conversely, as the aggressor and the "mob" or bullies as the victims. While academic bullying and harassment cannot be totally eradicated, this panel explores how the cultivation of a sense of civic responsibility and ethical duty can help alleviate some of the problems common in today's academic work environments.

In keeping with our 2017 site, this session turns to a trio of political speakers one would naturally associate with Boston: The Kennedys. Papers deal with Jack, Bobby and Teddy, exploring different aspects of their oratory. John F. Kennedy's speeches in West Germany will be discussed, as will Robert F. Kennedy's on civil rights. Edward M. Kennedy will be examined as a Massachusetts political figure, not as a national liberal "lion."

Short Course 1: Freedom to Innovate: Using Digital Story Maps in Communication Courses

Sponsor: Short Courses

Coordinator: Jennifer Babcock, Bridgewater College

This short course will teach participants how to incorporate a "digital humanities" technique – story mapping – into their own classroom. Participants will learn the pedagogical value of incorporating digital projects in the college classroom; explore various ways that a mapping technology can be used in a communication classroom; create a digital story map of their own during an interactive tutorial (so bring a laptop!); and leave with a specific idea for incorporating a story map assignment into their own classroom. This is a 90-minute short course. Collection of papers on the intersectionality of identities and how they are perceived within dominant groups.

"Re-conceptualizing the Measurement of Trait Argumentativeness: New Methods for Measuring an Established Trait"
Andrew Rancer, University of Akron

"A Psycholinguistic Approach to Differentiating High from Low Verbal Aggressiveness"
Charles J. Wigley III, Canisius College

Each presenter will provide attendees with a meaningful handout that supports each author's contention that freedom to innovate in measuring communication traits permits new approaches to validate, augment, and, in some cases, replace some traditional self-report measures. Using a variety of approaches to measure traits improves explanatory power and predictive validity. The advantages of using multiple measurement methods (primarily to reduce error variance and enhance understanding of relationships among variables) are highlighted.

In conjunction with this year’s theme of “<Freedom> to . . . <Freedom> from” this performance panel frames “freedom” as a hermeneutic of remembering and forgetting to undermine the idea of freedom as a stable, democratic trope. Each of the six performances contained within this panel complicate the idea of <freedom> as an ideograph—an abstract concept leveraged to crystalize political support and consensus. Here, performances of home, consumption, gender, affect, and disability serve as thematic from which to reflect on the relationships between memory, identity, and freedom.

Short Course 4: Exercising Pedagogical Freedoms in Communication Classrooms: Using Media Based Pedagogies for Social Awareness?

Sponsor: Short Courses
Coordinator: Jack Banks, University of Hartford
Coordinator: Nancy Bressler, Wheeling Jesuit University

This 90-minute short course aims to investigate the changing landscape of media immersion through the use of media production in classroom contexts. As a pedagogical technique in a technology-saturated learning environment, this course considers the opportunities of implementing and creating media to address larger pedagogical goals, such as media literacy, critical thinking skills, active learning techniques. In support of ECA’s theme of “Freedom,” this course specifically seeks to address how teachers can engage their students in political and cultural awareness, through the production of media. We observe how these media based pedagogies freely promote student engagement in civic action.!

Scholars Roundtable in Intercultural Communication: Freedom From 'Unconscious Bias' in The Academy: How can Intercultural Communication Competence 'Level the Playing Field?'

Janet Reynolds Bodenman, Bloomsburg University
Shannon Brogan, Kentucky State University

Lisa P. Phillips, Marietta College
Shavonne Shorter, Bloomsburg University

Since Hofstede's (1986) article on cultural differences in teaching and learning first appeared, there have been numerous studies published suggesting that 'unconscious bias' occurs in hiring, evaluation, and promotion of professors in our institutions of higher education. In the Communication discipline, more and more women, underrepresented minorities, and international students are earning doctorates and are teaching and seeking tenure track positions. What is our responsibility, as communication scholars, knowing that empirical evidence shows routine discrimination in the process toward tenure and promotion? How can we use our knowledge of Intercultural and Cross-cultural Communication to advocate for positive change and parity? This roundtable discussion features female voices from a variety of academic positions, institution types, ages, races, and ethnicities, to offer a position on this question in an effort to make the unconscious conscious.

Coordinator: Stephanie Verni, Stevenson University

Event Planning: Communicating Theory and Practice offers a unique approach that connects concepts in communication to event planning. Event planners are given the freedom to create new ideas and enjoy freedom from prescriptive routines. Understanding the "why" behind successful events is key to creating a unique experience for clients. With a solid basis in communication theory, this short course will enable event planners to manage and coordinate events with clarity and precision. Case studies and examples of event planning will be connected to the field of communication, and participants will uncover how effective, thoughtful planning strategies will yield successful events.

Isolation through verbal and technological "instruments of our own making" fuels the fires of dissent in the United States. Current racial and political tensions have been fed not only by scapegoating but also by mutually shared scapegoats. - Do you feel “free” to engage in scholarship? (How is your scholarly work constrained or unencumbered?)
- How have your scholarly practices evolved?
- What inspires your work?
- From what types of sources do you gain useful insights?
- How do you set up the "architecture" of your academic "files"?
- How do you structure research?
- In what ways do you communicate with colleagues about research?
- What is your writing process?

Short Course 2: Bridging the "Mass" and "Interpersonal" Divide: Integrating Mediated Communication Courses in the Undergraduate Curriculum

Sponsor: Short Courses
Coordinator: David Keith Westerman, North Dakota State University
Nicholas David Bowman, West Virginia University
Kenneth Alan Lachlan, University of Connecticut

This Courses on media and mass communication are a core element of many programs in communication study - such studies represent some of the earliest communication scholarship. Such courses commonly discuss critical technological advances, from the printing press to video games. However, some find it difficult to integrate discussions of the Internet into this curriculum, as the technology seems to fit both "mass" and "interpersonal" courses. In this 90-minute short course, we will discuss how a focus on "mediated communication" can help bridge this gap, using examples and course materials (as well as new technology) already in use.

Performance: Freedom from Unjust Poverty

Sponsor: Interpretation and Performance Studies
Chair: Jenny Warren, Collin College

Celeste Lacroix, College of Charleston
Carole Bennett, Oakland Community College
Michelle Wilcox, Crossroads Rhode Island
Amy Johnson, Eastern Michigan University

Using excerpts from oral histories, information from Crossroads Rhode Island: the largest homeless services organization in Rhode Island, other government agencies, original poetry and fiction, this panel explores how the voices of poverty are portrayed and how they are rarely free from judgment and condemnation. Dr. Lacroix and Carole Bennett will perform excerpts of the work, "The Working Poor", an original compilation by Prof. Bennett which includes excerpts from Barbara Ehrenreich's book Nickel and Dimed: on Not Getting By in America, oral histories collected from students matriculating at Oakland Community College in Michigan, government and public information about the working poor.

In addition, Amy Johnson will perform her poem, Change. These performances will be interspersed with reflections and commentary from panelist Michelle Wilcox, who will offer observations about the realities of homelessness and living below the poverty line in America. Following the performances and reflections, we will open the floor to discussion about ways in which faculty in communication and performance courses might encourage student, campus and community engagement with poverty and homelessness.

"Negative: The 2016 Presidential Election Was NOT Detrimental to the Health of American Democracy"

David LeVasseur, West Chester University of Pennsylvania

Lisa Gring-Pemble, George Mason University

J. Kanan Sawyer, West Chester University of Pennsylvania

Arguments CAN be loud and animated and respectful. That is the aim of this panel as we face down the other side to determine how the 2016 Presidential Election impacted our democracy. One side will provide arguments that our system has taken a devastatingly permanent hit, while the other will argue that nothing of the sort has happened. Come join us in the festivities and be prepared to jump in!

Reflections on Freedom in Black Mirror

Sponsor: Communication and Technology
Chair: Kimberly J. Hannah-Prater, University of Maryland
Respondent: Joy Cypher, Rowan Univesrity

"Technological Presence and Freedom from Loss in 'Be Right Back' (Series 2, Episode 1)"
Kathleen F. Oswald, Villanova University

"Freedom from Moral Responsibility: Artificial Intelligence and 'White Christmas' (Series 3 - Episode 1)"
George W. Boone, Augustana College

"Going against 'The Grain': The Future of Interpersonal Surveillance? ('The Entire History of You' - Series 1, Episode 3)"
Anna K. Turnage, Bloomsburg University

This panel takes the BBC series Black Mirror as a site for exploring ways technology is imagined to provide "freedom from" the mundane, the unpleasant, and the difficult. Each paper takes up one specific episode. From the use of AI as an expendable proxy in "White Christmas" to a digital echo providing freedom from grief and loss in "Be Right Back," Black Mirror reflects the dark and entangled nature of technology, culture, and freedom.
